

Washington, D.C.

In 1973, Baker Botts was one of the first national firms to establish a permanent Washington-based office which has since grown to an office of over 120 attorneys. We pride ourselves on the team approach we bring to every engagement, and we believe our collaborative approach improves the results we earn for our clients.

Baker Botts

Our Washington D.C. office provides a full range of legal services, including advice on antitrust, corporate and securities, energy, environmental, intellectual property and technology, white collar litigation and investigations, litigation, lobbying, project development and finance, tax, governmental affairs and appellate matters. Our lawyers represent foreign governments and private clients throughout the world.

Our depth of knowledge in issues facing regulated industries, with institutional experience in dealing with U.S. federal law, whether in the federal courts, executive branch departments and agencies, or the U.S. Congress, distinguishes the Washington D.C. office. Located less than a mile from the White House, a number of our lawyers have worked in the federal government, often at high levels. We draw on our experience working at the intersection of business and government to help our clients navigate the ever-changing, complex legal and regulatory landscape. That knowledge is readily deployed to represent local, national and international clients from a wide range of industries.
